 1836. 277 A boy with a hawk.
 353 Lord Chancellor Sir Thomas
 More receiving the benediction of his father, Judge
 More, in the Court of King's Bench.
 Whenever he passed through Westminster Hall to his place in the Chancery, by the Court of King's Bench, if his father had been seated, or he came, he would go into the same court, and there,
 reverently kneeling down in sight
 of them all, duly ask his father's blessing.
 The time chosen for the subject is the first day of term. Immediately under Sir Thomas are seen the judges' clerks and those of the court; and to the left of the picture are the counsellors; in the foreground on the same side is Margaret Roper, Sir Thomas's
 most devoted and amiable daughter, with her son, accompanied by a young lady, who is directing the boy's attention to the incident.
 Next to them, engaged in conversation, are the celebrated Erasmus of Rotterdam and Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, both the intimate friends of Sir Thomas More. The usher of the court and spectators on the right next the witness-box, complete the foreground. In advance of the

- chancellor, the mace and purse, containing the Great Seal of England, are borne, preceded by yeomen of the guard. In the distance, the jury-box is occupied by visitors, before whom are the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex. A portion of Westminster Hall forms the background.

44 Robert Cole, Esq., F.S.A.

1852. 206 The three inventors of printing, Guttenberg, Faust and Scheffer, examining and discussing the merits of Scheffer's invention of moveable type.

Peter Scheffer . . . was engaged about the year 1450 by John Faust, a wealthy lawyer of Mentz, to assist him in a partnership with Guttenberg . . . and then showed the impressions to Guttenberg and Faust, the latter promised him his daughter Christina, etc.

From the importance of the invention of moveable types, and that of printers' ink, which we owe also to Scheffer, his name has ever been justly ranked with those of Guttenberg and Faust as one of the triumvirate of the great discovery of printing.

278 The student preparing for honours.

291 The idler preparing to be plucked.

 275 Hesitation: Yes or No?
 593 The introduction of Raphael Sanzio to Pope Julian II.
 1867. 378 The submission of the Emperor Barbarossa to Pope Alexander the Third.
 . . . On Sunday the 24th July, 1177, the Pope repaired from the palace of St. Mark and solemnly absolved the Emperor and his partisans from the excommunication pronounced against him. The Doges, the patriarch, his bishops, clergy, and the people of Venice, with their crosses and their standards, marched in solemn procession to the church of St. Mark, where, in the vestibule of the Basilica, Frederick, laying aside his imperial dignity, and having prostrated himself at the feet of the Pope and having received his benediction, the Pope led him by the right hand into the church, etc.
 The background of the picture represents the actual scene in which the ceremony took place.
 1868. 85 The eve of the Sabbath.
 It is the custom among very observant Israelites on the eve of the Sabbath, for the mistress of the house, after having lighted the lamp which hangs over the table on which the meal is to be taken, to inaugurate the Sabbath with prayer. Bread and wine for sanctification are on the table.

1873. 322 The conference between Manasseh Ben Israel and Oliver Cromwell.

On Wednesday the 12th December, 1655, a conference was held in the long gallery at Whitehall, to which were invited the Lord Chief Justice, the Lord Chief Baron, the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, etc., to consider the proposal of Manasseh of admitting Jews to settle in England, etc. The scene represents Dr. Thomas Goodwin debating on the proposal. On Goodwin's left is Dr. John Owen and Dr. Samuel Cradock. At Cromwell's left hand is the Lord Chief Justice, Sir John Glynn. On his right is seen part of the head of the Chief Baron. At the feet of the Protector, Mr. Secretary Thurloe takes notes of the proceedings. The Lord Mayor Draper is present. . . . Second on the right of Manasseh is Hugh Peters, etc.

But as soon as the King was murdered, it was ordered that the children (the Duke of Gloucester and the Princess Elizabeth) should be removed into the country; that they should be treated without any addition of titles, and should sit at meat as the children of the family did. Whereupon they were removed to Penshurst, where they lived under the tuition of the Countess of Leicester, etc. Lady Leicester presides; the tutor, Mr. Lovell, is on her left hand and says grace. The Prince and Princess are at each end of the table.

1843. 502 An incident in the life of Napoleon.

In the deep silence of a beautiful moonlight night, a dog, leaping suddenly from beneath the clothes of his dead master, rushed upon us, and then immediately returned to his hiding-place, howling piteously; he alternately licked his master's face, and again flew at us; thus at once soliciting aid and seeking revenge.

This man, thought I, perhaps has friends in the camp, or in his company, and here he lies forsaken by all except his dog.

1846. 592 First reading of the Bible in the crypt of old St. Paul's.

The scene represented in the picture is laid in the crypt of old St. Paul's church, London, and the point of time chosen is in the spring of the year 1540, immediately after the installation of Boner as Bishop of London, and before the downfall of Cromwell.

The bibles being set up upon divers pillars in Paul's Church, fixed unto them with chains, for all men to read in them that would, great multitudes would resort thither to hear one John Porter, because he could read well, and had an audible voice. Boner and his chaplains being grieved withal (and the world beginning to frown upon the Gospellers), sent for the aforesaid Porter, and rebuked him very sharply for his reading. But Porter answered him, that he trusted he had done nothing contrary to the law, neither contrary to his advertisements which he had fixed over every Bible. But in fine, Boner sent him to Newgate, where he was miserably fettered in yrons, both legs and arms, with a collar of yron about his neck fastened to the wall of the dungeon, where within six or eight daies after he was found dead.—Acts and Monuments.

1827. 159 Alexander returning with Bucephalus.

A horse of great fierceness was offered to Philip for thirteen talents or £2,500. The King declined the offer, on perceiving that his most able grooms were unable to mount him. Alexander, still a youth, betted the king the price of the horse that he would succeed. The King accepted the bet. Alexander seized the animal by the head, sprang on his back, and putting him to his full speed, brought him to Philip completely vanquished, in the presence of Olympias, Aristotle, and Clytus. The King, deeply affected, exclaimed, "Seek another kingdom, my dear boy, for Macedon is too small for thee."

409 The Brides of Venice.

According to an annual custom, twelve ladies, daughters of the nobles, received marriage portions from the State, and were all married on the same day in the Cathedral of Olivolo. This ceremony met with no interruption until the pirates of Istria, in the ninth century, rushed into the church during the solemnization of the rites, plundered the sacred edifice, and carried off the brides. They had scarcely escaped beyond the Lagunes, when they were surprised by the Doge Candiano, who, assisted by the people of Sta. Maria Formosa, put every pirate to death, and brought back the Brides in triumph to Venice.

This picture is intended to represent the procession of 1528. The order was as follows: first the Bucentoro, containing the Doge and Senators; then the barge with the ecclesiastics, after which came the gondola of the brides, followed by one containing their intended husbands. In the latter the spectator is supposed to stand, etc., etc.

1874. 573 Mesmer.

Frederick Anton Mesmer was at the height of his popularity in Paris in the year 1780. His patients were received in a vast hall hung with mirrors and partially darkened. Some he affected to influence by passes of the hand or by the action of his magic wand, etc.

952 During the Wandering of Charles Edward Stuart.

Flora Macdonald, exhausted by the fatigues she had undergone, fell asleep at the bottom of the boat; Charles remained seated near, watching her slumbers, although his thoughts probably strayed away to his ruined fortunes and vanished hopes.

1880. 482 England's welcome to Henry V after Agincourt.

The people of England on hearing of the approach of their sovereign, were literally mad with joy and triumph. At Dover they rushed into the sea to meet him, and carried him ashore on their shoulders.

1881. 428 "Ich Dien."

John of Luxembourg, the old and blind King of Bohemia, finding that the battle of Crecy was going against the French, placed himself between two knights, whose bridles were interlaced on either side with his, and charged into the midst of the melée. In the morning they were all found dead on the field with their horses tied together. His crest, three ostrich feathers, and motto, "Ich Dien" (I serve) were adopted by the Black Prince, and have ever since been the cognisance of the Princes of Wales.

Calvin feeling his end approaching, informed the Council of State, and the Assembly of Pastors of Geneva, that he wished to confer with them once more. When assembled around his death-bed, he gave them his last instructions. The figure on Calvin's right is that of Viret; on his left that of Theodore de Beza; Farel, who although eighty years of age, came on foot from Neuchatel to Geneva (ninety miles) to see him once more, is sitting next to his bed. The four above-named Reformers are painted from original portraits belonging to the Public Library at Geneva. The Bible, the arm-chair and the books in the background, are painted from the originals that had belonged to Calvin, as well as the portrait in the background which is that of Knox, one of his disciples.

 242 Country wedding in the time of Henry V: the procession
 returning from church.

At an open part of the road through which the procession was to pass, a quintain was set up for the young men to run at, the bridegroom running the first course, as was his right.

The bridegroom is seen returning to the cavalcade, having escaped the sandbag, and he looks after his father, who is stirred up by recollections of his feats in younger days to try his chance at the quin-tain, totally regardless of the screams of his wife, seated behind him, and who will in all probability receive the blow from the sandbag. Another young man in the meanwhile, engages the bride
 in conversation. The young Squire, who had come to grace his steward's wedding, and whose horse is not used to such scenes, has met with a slight accident, to the amusement of those more skilled in horsemanship.

HOWSE, F. Painter.
17, York Street,

1846. 1330 King Henry II and Thomas A'Becket.

One day, as the king and the chancellor were riding together in the streets of London, they observed a beggar, who was shivering with cold. "Would it not be praiseworthy," said the king, "to give this poor man a warm coat in this severe season?" "It would surely," replied the chancellor, "and you do well, sir, in thinking of such good actions." "Then he shall have one presently," cried the king, and seizing the skirt of the chancellor's coat, which was scarlet and lined with ermine, began to pull it violently. Becket, after a vehement struggle, let go the coat, which the king bestowed on the beggar.—Hume.

(There seems to be some difference of opinion as to the spelling of the name. D. N. B. gives it as Humphry and Bryan and Redgrave as Humphrey. In the Royal Academy catalogues it is Humphry up to 1795, and Humphrey in 1796 and 1797. In the Gentleman's Magazine at the time of his death in 1810, the name is spelt Humphry.)

Sir Henry Lee sat in an armchair by the fire. He was wrapped in a cloak and his limbs extended on a stool, as if suffering from indisposition. His long white beard flowing over the dark coloured garment, gave him more the appearance of a hermit than an aged soldier or a man of quality; and that character was increased by the deep and devout attention with which he listened to a respectable old man, who, in a low but deep and full voice, was reading the Evening service of the Church of England. Alice Lee kneeled at the feet of her father.

But for that event, the future

been but a dreamer, a scholar, a poet—the peaceful rival of Petrarch—a man of thoughts, not deeds. But from that time, all his faculties, energies, fancies, genius, became concentrated to a single point; and patriotism, before a vision, leaped into the life and vigour of a passion. — Bulwer

1856. 398 The scapegoat.
The scene was painted at Oosdoom, on the margin of the saltencrusted shallows of the Dead sea. The mountains beyond are those of Edom. While the ceremonies of the day of atonement
were in progress in the Temple,
after the lots had been cast which had devoted one of the two goats for the Lord, and while it was being sacrificed as a burnt-offering, the congregation present manifested their impatience by calling upon the priest to hasten the departure of the scapegoat and afterwards by following the beast as he was led away by the man appointed, to a cliff about ten miles from Jerusalem, tormenting it by the way and shouting, "Hasten, carry away our sins." It is recorded that, on many occasions, the poor beast sprang over the precipice, and there perished; but that oft times it turned aside, to be hooted and driven away by every Israelite who met it, until it had reached a land not inhabited. A fillet of scarlet was bound about its horns, in the belief that, if the propitiation were accepted, the scarlet would become white. In order to ascertain the change of colour, in case the scapegoat could not be traced, a portion of the scarlet wool was preserved on a stone, and carefully watched by priests in the Temple.

 tour in India.

The afternoon sport was inaugurated by a display rarely given to anyone to witness. . . .
 Such a spectacle was never beheld by living man; and it may be doubted if the like was ever seen in past ages. This was a procession of 700 elephants. The Prince sat in his howdah waiting for three quarters of an hour, and watching the wonderful column
 cross the arm of the Sarda.
 There were 600 elephants belonging to Nepaul, and about 100 which had come over with the Prince. To each elephant there were at least two persons—the mahout and a man on the pad;
 many carried three or four people.
 It is not too much to say that there were 1800 persons engaged in the beat.

At last they all stood up in a circle together, and the minister of God, who, driven from his kirk by bloodthirsty persecution, prayed and preached in the wilderness, baptized infants with the water of the running brook, and joined in wedlock the hands of those whose hearts longed to be united in those dark and deadly times. Few words were uttered by the gracious old man, but these few were solemn and full of cheer.

net was also there. Dr.
Burnet preached two sermons to Lord Russell the day before he suffered. He says:

I had been with the Lord Russell four whole afternoons before that; for he desired to be alone till 12 of the clock. He did all that while possess his soul with so clear a serenity in such a calm and Christian manner, that I still reckon it a particular happiness as well as an honour, that I attended then upon him. Before I preached these two sermons, he received the sacrament from Dr. Tillotson's hands.

1853. 22 Melancthon.

A French traveller having one day found the Preceptor of Germany rocking his infant with one hand and a book in the other, started back in surprise; but Melancthon, without being discomposed, so warmly explained to him the value of children in the sight of God, that the stranger left the house wiser than he entered it.

1853. 469 Edward IV's first interview with Elizabeth Woodville.

The King came accidentally to the house after a hunting party, in order to pay a visit to the Duchess of Bedford, his aunt, who had espoused in second marriage Sir Richard Woodville. Elizabeth, their daughter, had married Sir John Grey of Groby, by whom she had children; and her husband being slain in the second battle of St. Albans, on the Lancastrian side, and his estates being for that reason confiscated, his widow retired to live with her father, and as the occasion seemed favorable for obtaining some grace from this gallant monarch, the young widow flung herself at his feet, entreating him to have pity on her children. The sight of so much beauty in affliction strongly affected the amorous Edward; her sorrow, so becoming a virtuous matron, made his esteem and regard quickly correspond to his affection.—Hume.

1854. 503 Tyndale translating the bible into English.

Hidden, like Luther at the Wartburg, not, however, in a castle, but in a humble lodging, Tyndale, like the Saxon reformer, spent his days and nights translating the Bible; but not having an Elector of Saxony to protect him, he was forced to change his residence from time to time at this epoch. Fryth, who had escaped from the prisons at Oxford, rejoined Tyndale, etc.

1855. 361 The abdication of Mary Queen of Scots.

1822. 313 Battle of Waterloo.
His Grace the Duke of Wellington is directing the advance of the British Army in pursuit of the French; and in the hollow road leading from La Belle Alliance to La Haye Sainte, Buonaparte is seeming to make his retreat, whilst Marshal Ney is attempting to rally the routed troops. The Duke of Wellington is attended by his personal staff, Lord Fitzroy Somerset, Lord George Lennox, Lord Arthur Hill, the Hon. Colonel Percy, Sir Felton Hervey and Colonel Freemantle.
Lord Hill is coming up on the right, with the Duke of Richmond and the Hon. Captain Cathcart.
The Marquis of Anglesey is on the left, commanding the cavalry; Lord Edward Somerset is in the centre, leading the Household Brigade of Life Guards, First Dragoon Guards, and the Royal Horse Guards, Blue; the latter are conducted by Sir Robt. and Col. Hill.
The Foot Guards and Light Division are rapidly following the French, and the left of the British line is advancing, with the Prussians on their flank.

Bonaparte giving his last orders when quitting the field of battle. He is near La Belle Alliance; in his rear and occupying all the horizon, is the British Army advancing, with the Prussians appearing on the left. In the centre, near Napoleon, is a conflict between the Life Guards and the Cuirassiers; on his right is the great mass of the French troops in confusion and flight. The two columns of English Hussars are in pursuit and attack. Near the foreground on the Emperor's right is Marshal Ney endeavouring to check and rally the fugitives.

The Duke of Wellington is at the centre of the British line; in his rear is La Haye Sainte, the mill at Mont St. Jean, and the church at Waterloo.

- 444 Clemency of Napoleon.

Madam, he said, while such a proof as I have here exists, I cannot pardon your husband: as he spoke, he placed in her hand a paper, in which the crime was too surely acknowledged under the signature of the accused. She clasped the scroll firmly, and fixing her eyes on Napoleon, read something which gave her strength to rush towards the hearth, and in an instant the record had blazed and perished. The happy, but trembling, woman, once more sought the eyes of the Emperor, but in vain; one hand hid them from her view, and the other waved her from him . . . the doom of death was changed to that of banishment.

1849. 938 Battle of Meeanee. An outline drawn under the inspection of General Sir Charles Napier, G.C.B.
- Sir Charles Napier, is with his staff on the bank of the dry bed of the Fallalah river, on the edge of a nullah, or watercourse, where parties of the 22nd are attacking the Beloochees hand to hand, led by Major McMurdo. The right and the centre of the 22nd are firing from the bank flanked by the artillery on the right; one gun is pointed through a breach in the wall, and further up the wall is the breach defended by Captain Tew's company. The 12th, 25th and Native Infantry are coming into action with the 9th Bengal Cavalry and Scinde Horse. The Belooche army occupies the dry bed of the river, and extends in enormous masses, in front of the British force. The officers introduced are General Sir Charles Napier, Colonel Warrington, Colonel McPherson, Colonel Pennefather, wounded, carried to the rear; Major Wylie, Major McMurdo, Lieutenant Brennan, Lieutenant Pelly, Lieutenant Thompson, Dr. Gibbon, and Ali Ackbar, the interpreter, Lieutenant, now Major, McMurdo is fighting with Khan Mohamed, whom he killed.

1853. 224 Waterloo, 1815.

The Duke of Wellington attended by his staff, is directing the advance of the army, Lord Hill is in the foreground about to mount a horse, his own having been killed under him. The Marquess of Anglesey is issuing orders for the cavalry. In front of his Grace the Foot Guards are advancing to the attack and pursuit, and further on his right the Light Brigade, under Lord Seaton, is taking the enemy in flank. On the left of the Duke the Household Cavalry Brigade. The farm house of La Haye Sainte. Three small trees mark the place where General Picton fell. The British line, under Sir J. Kempt, extends to the left until it unites with the Prussian artillery, which was opened on the French. The French troops, infantry and cavalry, led by Marshal Ney, are descending to attack the British force. He is on a white horse, trying to rally the head of the column, which has just turned to retreat. Napoleon is in the road

- below the small inn, La Belle Alliance; on his right is a column of French infantry with three lines of reserve and squadrons of Lancers towards the Prussian force. The Prince of Orange is to the left and rear of the Duke. Lord Fitzroy Somerset, wounded, is on his Grace's right, conducted to the rear by General Alava.

1854. 13 Battle of Hyderabad, 24th March, 1843.
- Lieut.-General Sir C. Napier is on the height, under the colors of the Queen's 22nd Regiment, with his aide-de-camp, Lieut.-Colonel McMurdo, having succeeded in leading the 22nd Regiment to storm the battery at the top of the second ravine or nullah. The hand-to-hand conflict is heavy in the nullahs, and in the dry bed of the Fullaillee river, which forms the foreground. In the rear of the General parties of the 22nd led by Major George, are making their way through the nullahs and over the ramparts. In their rear, on the plain, the 25th, 21st, 12th and 8th and 1st Regiments of Bengal Infantry are coming into action, by an échelon movement. On their left, Colonel Leslie is leading the artillery into the dry bed of the river, to cross and rush up the opposite bank to attack the enemy.
- In the front of the picture, the Poonah Irregular Horse (in green uniform). In their rear, the 9th Bengal Light Cavalry, led by Major Storey and Captain Fait. Surgeon Turner is with the 9th. On the height, where many of the 22nd have fallen, is Major Poole, commanding the brigade; below him is Colonel Leslie, on a white charger, accompanied by Capt. Rowan; on their left is Lieut.-Smith, mortally wounded; and in the rear is Trumpeter McPhelan, taking a large standard from a Belooch. In the centre of the picture, Major Conway is leading the light infantry of the 22nd; behind him is Corporal Kelly, seizing a silver standard. Capt. Coote is forcing an ensign from a Belooch, in front of Sir C. Napier. Hyderabad is in the distance. The whole drawn under the direction of the late General Sir Charles Napier.

1856. 132 Cologne—vegetable market.
- 186 Trukkee, 28th February, 1845.
- General Sir Charles J. Napier is in the act of calling off his troops from the pursuit of the robbers into the recesses of the rocks. The general saw the heights lined with matchlock men. To spare the effusion of blood on both sides he closed the entrance with his troops, and obliged the robbers to surrender. Colonel McMurdo is leading the pursuit. Mirza Ally Ackbar Khan is on the right of the general.
- The retiring horsemen suddenly rode into a chasm amongst the rocks, and a guide involuntarily exclaimed as they disappeared, "Trukkee!" having only the evening before declared it was two marches distant. This exclamation, coupled with the confident retreat of the robbers, gave warrant that the long-hidden fortress was found, and the confederates brought to bay.

1858. 240 The destruction of the fortress of Emaum Ghur, January, 1848.
- General Sir Charles Napier’s march upon Emaum Ghur is one of the most curious military feats which I have ever known to be performed, or have ever perused an account of in my life. He moved his troops through the desert against hostile forces: he had his guns transported under circumstances of extreme difficulty, and in a manner most extraordinary, and he cut off a retreat of the enemy which rendered it impossible for them ever to regain their positions.—Duke of Wellington in the House of Lords.

- 811 The Phocians defeating the Thessalians by a stratagem.
- The Phocenses were not wanting in subtlety of invention. For the camps of the enemy once happening to be fixed near the entrance to Phocis, five hundred chosen men of the Phocenses, as soon as the moon had completed her orb, attacked the Thessalians in the night, having rubbed their bodies over with plaster, and likewise their armour, which by this means became white. The sufferers besieged at Lucknow, rescued by General Lord Clyde, and the army on the march to the British Camp, were thus described by his Lordship: "In leading the sufferers out of Lucknow, my great anxiety was to keep them silent, and to press them to exertion to reach the British camp. My distress and difficulties were great, as the women from debility would sit down, and the children cried and mourned under their fears and privations." This and the companion picture of Cawnpore were painted for, and entirely under the direction of, the late Field Marshal Lord Clyde, who died before their completion.

- 266 Cawnpore, the passage of the Ganges at Cawnpore on the 29th and 30th November, 1859. Companion to Lucknow, No. 111.

Occupied more than thirty hours.

The army and the sufferers rescued from Lucknow. Lord Clyde with his staff on the rising ground.

On the foreground the medical officers are attending to the sick. The number of women, children, and sick and wounded soldiers who were carried amounted to about 1500. The sick were conveyed in doolies, the women and children in country carts; the baggage carried by elephants and camels. The bridge of boats being under the fire of the enemy, Captain Peel's heavy guns were placed in position on the left bank of the Ganges, about half a mile above the bridge to keep down the fire of the enemy's guns.

The Cavalry Brigade (the 9th Lancers and the Punjab Horse) with Brigadier the Hon. A. Hope (who is on the bridge) commanding the 93rd Highlanders, the 53rd Foot and the 4th Punjab Rifles, and a light field battery, passed the bridge and took up a position to cover the formation of a camp. A brigade of infantry and some field artillery, under General Inglis, remained on the left bank until all impediments had passed.

A steamer was moored at the bridge head, and some native boats.

1869. 476 Sketch of the conquest and destruction of Magdala.

Lord Napier is on a white horse, with his staff, and various troops. The army and the inhabitants are retiring from the fortress.

263 The wreck of the Forfarshire steamer in 1838, from sketches and portraits taken on the spot.

On the approach of Darling and his heroic daughter to the rock,
they found the unfortunate sufferers in a state bordering on madness; in consequence of which they were compelled to back water and lay off, for it was found impossible by remonstrance to prevent them from attempting to leap into the boat, which would have been certain destruction to the whole.

The man pointing is the carpenter, who is endeavouring to arouse and persuade the woman to leave her children, death having relieved them of their sufferings.
She then with four of the most exhausted was first taken from the rock, Darling having promised to return for the other nine.

 245 } The Wreckers.
 246 }

Till of late years, on many parts of our coast, the fishermen, who united in that calling, smuggling and wrecking, imagined themselves entitled to all property cast
 upon their shores, provided none of the crew lived to claim it, to insure which they did not hesitate to murder such as reached the shore alive, or else detain till an opportunity offered of sending them away or otherwise disposing of them. A wreck was termed a “God send,” to obtain which they often resorted to the diabolical expedient of decoying the fated vessel to the rocks, by means of a torch or lantern attached to the head of a horse, which, being led along the edge of the cliffs, was mistaken by ships in distress for the light of some other vessel riding in safety, and so became a certain lure to destruction.

The left wing supposes some of these wretches watching the progress of a vessel under an approaching storm; the right wing represents the decoy; the centre is the division of the spoil, when drunkenness, gambling, and violence are seen—the accompaniments of their crime. On the left of this picture a young profligate is insulting a female, who, with her father, are supposed to be the only survivors from the wreck. A boy above is taking up the alarm communicated by some figures in the distance, and upper portion of the picture of the approach of those authorities who have at length removed the evil from our coasts, etc.

 stays in his course, etc.”
 541 The Harvest home—evening.

The last load is just brought in,
 and stops under the village may-pole, which has been decorated for the occasion, the captain of the reapers singing rhymes in honour of the event; the harvest queen advances, accompanied by the cheerful pipe and tabor; the squire congratulates the farmer on the successful termination of his labour; the ale barrel is broached, neighbours come to the merry-

- making, while a group of reapers are already assembled round the maypole, etc. etc.

323 The Saint's day.
An ancient custom still observed in many parts of England. The aged inmates of the different almshouses, on particular Saints' days and holidays, bring a table without the gate, on which they place a money box; when dressed in their best, and bringing their offering of flowers, they arrange themselves with much ceremony to receive the alms of the charitable, etc.

206 General Sir George Murray, G.C.B., G.C.H., Master-General of the Ordnance.
306 John Knox endeavouring to restrain the violence of the people, who, excited by his eloquence against the church of Rome, destroyed the altar, missals, images of Saints, etc., at Perth, 1559.

The day after the memorable meeting at Stirling, Knox preached in Perth, with his usual vehemence, against the mass, idolatrous worship, and adoration of Saints and images, when a priest proceeding to celebrate mass, and anxious to counteract the effect of the discourse, drew the attention of the bystanders to the altar. This excited some expressions of ridicule from a boy, for which the priest imprudently struck him.

- Knight, John Prescott, R.A.—continued.
The boy retaliated by throwing a stone, and damaged the picture above the altar, which aroused the iconoclastic fury of the people, who had taken part with the boy, and they destroyed the pictures, images, missals, and all the symbols of Romish worship. Their zeal was so furious that Knox, although assisted by the civil authorities, in vain exerted himself to stop the ravages of what he termed "the rascal multitude."

1836. 374 The Plundering of Basing House, Hants; taken and destroyed by Cromwell, October 14, 1645.

The picture is intended to represent the sacking, after a siege of two years, of one of the chambers. The principal group to the right are prisoners. The troopers are occupied in appropriating or destroying the plunder, of which they found great store, consisting of Popish books, priests' dresses, gold and silver plate, cash, etc.

The dead figure to the left is Major Robinson, a stage player, killed by Major-General Harrison, who is said to have refused him quarter, and to have shot him in the head when he laid down his arms, with this quotation from scripture: "Cursed is he that doeth the work of the Lord negligently."

1837. 455 The battle of Langside.

"To horse! to horse!" said Catherine Seyton; "mount and be gone, or we are all lost, my lord abbot! To horse, Roland! my gracious liege, to horse! Ere this we should have ridden a mile."

"Look on these features," said Mary, pointing to the dying knight, who had been unhelmed by some compassionate hand. "Look there, and tell me if she, who ruins all who love her, ought to fly a foot further to save her wretched life?"

While she spoke her tears fell fast on the face of the dying man, who continued to fix his eyes on her with an eagerness of passion which death itself could hardly subdue. "Mourn not for me," he said faintly, "but care for your own safety. I die in mine armour as a Douglas should, and I die pitied by Mary Stewart."

1841. 17 The temptation of Andrew Marvell.

Andrew Marvell represented Kingston-upon-Hull in the Parliaments of Charles II's time, with whose lively conversation the merry monarch was much delighted; and the next morning after passing an evening in Marvell's society, the King sent the lord-treasurer Danby with a particular message from himself, and to request his acceptance of a thousand guineas. Marvell lodged on the second floor of a court near the Strand. His Lordship found him writing, and delivered his errand. "Pray what had I for dinner yesterday?" said Marvell, appealing to his servant. "A shoulder of mutton, sir." "And what have I to-day?" "The remainder hashed." "And to-morrow, my lord, I shall have a sweet blade bone broiled, and I am sure, my lord, his Majesty will be too tender in future to bribe a man with golden apples who lives so well on the viands of his native country." The lord-treasurer withdrew with smiles, and Mr. Marvell sent to his bookseller for the loan of a guinea.—Vide Life of Marvell.

1842. 278 The departure of Charles II from Bentley in Staffordshire, the house of Colonel Lane.

Miss Lane having obtained a Parliamentary pass to visit her kinswoman, Mrs. Norton, who lived near Bristol, it was arranged that the King, personating a neighbour's son, should ride double before the young lady.

The remainder of the party consisted of her cousin, a Mr. Lascelles and his wife, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Petre. Old Mr. and Mrs. Lane descended to the courtyard to witness their daughter's departure; Lord Wilmot, preceding the party with a hawk on his fist and spaniel by his side, passed as a stranger in pursuit of his sport.—Clarendon.

275 The Eve of the battle of Edg-hill.

King Charles I is said to have taken refreshment, and to have slept, with the two Princes, at a cottage in Radway, between which place and Kington was the field of battle. The principal group is intended to represent a council of war, including portraits of King Charles I, the Earl of Lindsey, General, Prince Rupert, who commanded the horse, Sir Jacob Astley, the Lord Bernard Stuart, and Sir Edmund Verney, who carried the King's standard. On the left are the two Princes, Charles and James.—Clarendon.

152 The wounded smuggler.

1846. 337 Mary Avenel showing her trinkets to Mysie Happer.

Nothing, indeed, could exhibit a stronger contrast than the appearance of the two girls; the good-humoured, laughter-loving countenance of the maid of the mill, who stood gazing with un-repressed astonishment on whatever was, in her inexperienced eye, rare and costly, and with a humble, and at the same time cheerful acquiescence in her inferiority, asking all the little queries about the use and value of the ornaments, while Mary Avenel, with her quiet composed dignity and placidity of manner, produced them one after another for the amusement of her companion.

1847. 140 Giving alms.

This knight and his daughter had the character of very good alms-folks, in respect of their great liberality to the poor.—Strype.

1848. 62 Queen Margaret of Anjou and the robber of Hexham.

Margaret having ascertained that the robber of Hexham was an outlawed Lancastrian, accompanied him to his rude abode, in the outskirts of the forest, where she and the weary and exhausted prince, refreshed by his wife, remained hidden for two days.

- 191 Henrietta Maria, Queen of England, and the Prince of Wales assisting at the toilet of Mademoiselle Montpensier.

One day, when I was going to a grand assembly of men by Madame de Choisy, the Queen of England would dress me and arrange my hair herself. She came for this purpose to my apartments, and took the utmost pains to set me off to the best advantage, and the Prince of Wales held the flambeau near me, to light my toilette the whole time.

I wore black, white and carnation; my parure of precious stones was fastened by ribbons of these colours; I wore also a plume of the same kind; all had been fancied and ordered by the Queen of England.

1849. 83 Trusty Tomkins appearing before Sir Henry Lee.

As he spoke, the military preacher abandoned his leafy screen, and stalking forward stood unexpectedly before the old Cavalier, who stared at him as if he thought his expression had actually raised the devil. . . . The soldier, with little courtesy, took out a scroll.—Woodstock.

1849. 115 Il tempo del Carnovale.
364 Rhodopis the Greek Cinderella.

Once when she was bathing, fortune, which is fond of effecting strange and wonderful things, gave her what her beauty rather than her mind deserved; while she was bathing, and her attendants were taking care of her raiment, an eagle swooped down, seized one of her sandals, went off with it and bore it to Memphis, and as King Psammeticus was administering justice dropped it into his bosom. The King was struck with the form of the sandal . . . he issued an order to search through all Egypt for the person to whom the sandal belonged . . . he made her his wife.—Aelian.

1851. 127 Cromwell, attended by Fairfax, reading a letter found in the King's cabinet, taken at the battle of Naseby, fought between King Charles the First and the Parliament, June 14, 1645, including portraits of Skipton and Ireton.

Among the other spoils, was seized the King's cabinet with the copies of his letters to the Queen, which the Parliament afterwards ordered to be published.—Hume.

1852. 47 The death of Edward III.

On the morning of his death, the Lady Alice Perers drew the ring from his finger and departed. The other domestics had separated to plunder the palace; but a priest, who chanced to be present, hastening to the bed of the dying monarch, admonished him of his situation, and made him prepare himself to appear before his Creator. Edward, who had just strength sufficient to thank him, took a crucifix into his hands, kissed it, wept, and expired.

1853. 217 The "Iron Mask."

From the researches of M. Delort, by the permission of the Count d'Hauterive, keeper of the archives of the office of Secretary of State for the Foreign Department, it has been proved beyond a doubt that the Iron Mask was an Italian of the name of Matthioli, born 1st December, 1640.

The servants who bring him his food, his confessor, and a physician from Pragelas, a town six leagues distant, are the only persons permitted to see him, and that only in the presence of the Governor, St. Mars, and his Lieutenant, Blainvilliers.

The mask was not, as has been erroneously supposed, made of iron, but one of black velvet strengthened with whalebone, and fastened behind the head with a padlock, which did not prevent the prisoner from eating or drinking, or impede his respiration.

1854. 140 Bragela.

272 The siesta.

1856. 215 Assassination of Alboin, King of the Lombards.

His faithless spouse was anxious for his health and repose; the gates of the palace were shut, the arms removed, the attendants dismissed, and Rosamond, after lulling him to rest by her tender caresses, unbolted the chamber door, and urged the reluctant conspirators to the instant execution of the deed. On the first alarm the warrior started from his couch; his sword which he attempted to draw had been fastened to the scabbard by the hand of Rosamond; and a small stool, his only weapon, could not long protect him from the spears of the assassins.

1858. 192 The interview between Count de Belflor and Leonora de Cespides.

These words were no sooner ended than the Count, who was concealed behind the hangings, appeared, and throwing himself at Leonora's feet, Madam, said he, pardon the stratagem of a lover, who could no longer live without speaking to you; if this obliging matron had not procured me this opportunity I should have abandoned myself to despair, etc.—The Devil on two sticks.

About this time his nurse, who had always treated him as her own son, died; and it was natural for him to take care of those effects which, by her death, were, as he imagined, become his own. He therefore went to her house, opened her boxes, and examined her papers, among which he found some letters written by her to Lady Mason, which informed him of his birth and the reasons for which it was concealed, etc.—Johnson.

1867. 55 Oliver Cromwell, with some of his officers, visits the house of Sir Walter Stewart, called Allerton, on the 1st of May, 1651.

There was none to entertain him but the lady and Sir Walter's sickly son. . . . All passed easy, and James being a lad of ten years came so near as to handle the hilt of one of the swords, upon which Cromwell stroked his head, saying, "You are my little Captain," and this was all the commission our Captain of Allerton ever had, etc.—Carlyle.

lutely, under her husband's will.
There, at least, was subsistence,

and the sale of prints from the plates produceed for a time a respectable means. . . . But twenty years after his death the copyrights had expired—the poor woman's hope from this source was clean gone. She was then absolutely living by her lodgings;
and it was not until three years
after that, on the recommendation of the King, the Council of the Royal Academy voted her an annuity of £40.
