"SON," said my mother,
 When I was knee-high,
"You've need of clothes to cover you,
 And not a rag have I.

"There's nothing in the house
 To make a boy breeches,
Nor shears to cut a cloth with
 Nor thread to take stitches.

"There's nothing in the house
 But a loaf-end of rye,
And a harp with a woman's head
 Nobody will buy,"
 And she began to cry.

That was in the early fall.
 When came the late fall,
"Son," she said, "the sight of you
 Makes your mother's blood crawl,-

"Little skinny shoulder-blades
 Sticking through your clothes!
And where you'll get a jacket from God above knows.

"It's lucky for me, lad,
 Your daddy's in the ground,
And can't see the way I let
 His son go around!"
 And she made a queer sound.

That was in the late fall.
 When the winter came,
I'd not a pair of breeches
 Nor a shirt to my name.

I couldn't go to school,
 Or out of doors to play.
And all the other little boys
 Passed our way.

The Ballad Of The Harp–Weaver

"Son," said my mother,
"Come, climb into my lap,
And I'll chafe your little bones
While you take a nap."

And, oh, but we were silly
For half an hour or more,
Me with my long legs
Dragging on the floor,

A–rock–rock–rocking
To a mother–goose rhyme!
Oh, but we were happy
For half an hour's time!

But there was I, a great boy,
And what would folks say
To hear my mother singing me
To sleep all day,
In such a daft way?

Men say the winter
Was bad that year;
Fuel was scarce,
And food was dear.

A wind with a wolf's head
Howled about our door,
And we burned up the chairs
And sat upon the floor.

All that was left us
Was a chair we couldn't break,
And the harp with a woman's head
Nobody would take,
For song or pity's sake.

The night before Christmas
I cried with the cold,
I cried myself to sleep
Like a two–year–old.

And in the deep night
I felt my mother rise,
And stare down upon me
With love in her eyes.

I saw my mother sitting
On the one good chair,
A light falling on her

The Ballad Of The Harp–Weaver

From I couldn't tell where,
Looking nineteen,
 And not a day older,
And the harp with a woman's head
 Leaned against her shoulder.

Her thin fingers, moving
 In the thin, tall strings,
Were weav–weav–weaving
 Wonderful things.

Many bright threads,
 From where I couldn't see,
Were running through the harp–strings
 Rapidly,

And gold threads whistling
 Through my mother's hand.
I saw the web grow,
 And the pattern expand.

She wove a child's jacket,
 And when it was done
She laid it on the floor
 And wove another one.

She wove a red cloak
 So regal to see,
"She's made it for a king's son,"
 I said, "and not for me."
 But I knew it was for me.

She wove a pair of breeches
 Quicker than that!
She wove a pair of boots
 And a little cocked hat.

She wove a pair of mittens,
 She wove a little blouse,
She wove all night
 In the still, cold house.

She sang as she worked,
 And the harp–strings spoke;
Her voice never faltered,
 And the thread never broke.
 And when I awoke,-

There sat my mother
 With the harp against her shoulder

Looking nineteen
And not a day older,

A smile about her lips,
And a light about her head,
And her hands in the harp–strings
Frozen dead.

And piled up beside her
And toppling to the skies,
Were the clothes of a king's son,
Just my size.
